Sam and the Long Bike Ride

Sam had just learned how to ride a bike, but he was still a little wobbly. His big brother challenged him to ride all the way to the top of the big hill near their house.

At first, Sam was excited, but halfway up, his legs began to hurt, and he wanted to stop. He thought about turning back, but then he remembered what his brother always said: “You’re stronger than you think.”

So Sam took a deep breath and kept going, one slow pedal at a time. Birds flew by and the wind brushed his face, helping him feel calm. Finally, he reached the top! He was tired but very proud. His brother gave him a high-five and said, “I knew you could do it!”

Sam smiled wide and said, “I almost gave up, but I’m glad I didn’t.”

From that day on, whenever things felt hard, Sam remembered the hill and kept going.
